NEW NATIONAL PARK

The national government has been urged to create a grand national park at the mouth of the Mississippi river, in Minnesota, and pre-empting the necessary land before the destruction of trees has marred their natural beauty. Upon this tract of land are tribes of Indians, numbering in all 1,000. It is proposed that the Indians be left to live on the land, and for the most part they are friendly to the government. They are a unique and for the most part peaceful people, and would serve as valuable guides to tourists and sportsmen. Already they are employed in industries which are thriving. Among these is lacemaking. Bishop Whipple, who has labored among the Indians of Minnesota for forty years, is also credited with the assistance of Miss Spill, a woman who, by nursing in her plain, teaching in missions and making the Indian generally, has been able to make the Indian a more useful citizen. The Indian has been made a more useful citizen by the help of the government. The Indian has been made a more useful citizen by the help of the government. THE MALAY PENINSULA

A royal expedition has just started from London for the Malay peninsula, the principal members being Mr. N. A. Macdonald, who was a member of the expedition to the Shennan Shan states in 1899, and Mr. H. C. Robinson, who is an assistant in the zoological department of University College, Liverpool. The expedition will remain for a year in the native state of Jalor, near the east coast of lower Siam, and will explore that region, as well as the neighborhood of Patani and Bheer. One of its special objects is the study of the pre-Malayan tribes of the peninsula, who inhabit the center of the island. Collections will also be made of animals and plants, as well as of the fauna, both living and extinct, of certain very large limestone caves, which are found in various places and which are said to extend for great distances underground. Adequate time will also be spent in studying the birds of the peninsula, and it is believed that by such observations much new light will be thrown on the history and allied phenomena. Mr. Robinson is taking with him dresses and tools for the investigation of the marine fauna, and he purposes to pump sea water through fine silk nets to make during the outward voyage a collection of the surface plankton of the Red Sea and Indian Ocean.

The Doctor's Dilemma

By Hesba Stretton

A little crumbling path led round the rock and along the edge of the ravine. I chose it because from it I could see all the fantastic shore, bending in a semi-circle towards the Isle of Breckhou, with tiny, untrodden bays, covered at this hour with only glittering ripples, and with all the soft and tender shadows of the headlands falling across them. I was just going to look to them when the loose stones on the crumbling path gave way under my tread, and before I could recover my foothold I found myself slipping down the almost perpendicular face of the cliff, and vainly clutching at every bramble and tuft of grass growing in its clefts.

I landed with a shock far below, and for some time lay insensible. As nearly as I could make out, it would be high water in about two hours. Tardif had set off at low water, but before starting he had said something about returning at high tide, and running up his boat on the beach of our little bay. If he did that he must pass close by me. It was Saturday morning, and he was in the habit of returning early on Saturdays, that he might prepare for the services of the next day.

At last—whether years or hours only had gone by, I could not then have told you—I heard the regular and careful tread of his upon the water, and presently the grating of a boat's keel upon the shingle. I could not turn round or raise my head, but I was sure it was Tardif.

"Tardif!" I cried, attempting to shout, but my voice sounded very weak in my own ears, and the other sounds about me seemed very loud.

He paused then, and stood quite still, listening. I ran the fingers of my right hand through the loose pebbles about me, and his ear caught the slight noise. In a moment I heard his strong feet coming across them towards me.

"Mam zelle," he exclaimed, "what has happened?"

I tried to smile at his honest, brown face bent over me, full of alarm. It was so great a relief to see a face like his after that long, weary agony. "I've fallen down the cliff," I said feebly, "and I am hurt."

The strong man shook, and his hand trembled as he stooped down and laid it under my head to lift it up a little. His agitation touched me to the heart.

"Tardif," I whispered, "it is not very much, and I might have been killed. I think my foot is hurt, and I am quite sure my arm is broken."

He lifted me in his arms as easily and tenderly as a mother lifts up her child, and carried me gently up the steep slope which led homewards. It seemed a long time before we reached the farmyard gate, and he shouted, with a tremendous voice, to his mother to come and open the door.

"Never, never shall I forget to-night. I could not sleep, but I enjoyed my mind wandering a little. Hundreds of times I fell myself down on the shore, lying helpless. Then I was back again in my own home in Adelaide, on my father's sheep farm, and he was still alive, and with no thought but how to make everything bright and glad for me; and hundreds of times I saw the woman who was afterwards to be my stepmother, stealing up to the door and trying to get in to him and to me."

Twice Tardif brought me a cup of tea, and I was very glad when into my room. It seemed to bring clearness to my brain.

"Mam zelle," said Tardif, coming to my side, "I am going to fetch a doctor."

"But it is Sunday," I answered faintly. "I know that no boatman put out to sea willingly on a Sunday from Sark, and the doctor would not be here on a Sunday, had he been here, he would not be here, and I will be right, mam zelle, he answered with glowing eyes. "I have no doubt, but I am not a doctor, I said, and he replied.

CHAPTER III.

Martin Dobree, came into the room, belonged to Julia, and fully half her household expenses were defrayed by her. Our practice, which he told me remarkably share in its profits, was divided between Martin, Doctor Dobree, and myself.

Through Martin, I was introduced to the family of the island, but our branch of the family was poorer than the others. We had been growing poorer for four generations. We had been growing poorer steadily downwards.

My father lived ostensibly by his profession, but actually upon the income of my cousin, Julia Dobree, who had been his ward from her childhood. The house we dwelt in, a pleasant one in the island, I shared between us, was not a large one, though for its extent it was lavishly enough. But there always is an immense number of medical men in Guernsey in proportion to its population, and the island is healthy. There was small chance for any of us to make a fortune.

My engagement to Julia came about so easily and naturally that I was perfectly contented with it. We had been engaged since Christmas, and were to be married in the early summer. We were to set up housekeeping for ourselves; that was a point Julia was bent upon. A suitable house had fallen vacant in one of the higher streets of St. Peter Port, which commanded a noble view of the sea and the surrounding islands. We had taken it, though it was farther from the center of the island than I should have chosen to be. She and I were very busy, about see but a very old friend of mine, Tardif, of the Havre Gosselin. His handsome but weather-beaten face betrayed great anxiety. My father looked chagrined and irresolute.

"Here's a pretty piece of work, Martin," he said. "Tardif wants one of us to go back with him to Sark, to see a woman who has fallen from the cliffs and broken her arm, confound it!"

"Dr. Martin," cried Tardif excitedly, "I beg of you to come this instant even. She has been lying in anguish since mid-day yesterday—twenty-four hours now, she said. I started at dawn this morning, but both wind and tide were against me, and I have been waiting here some time. Be quick, doctor! If she should be dead!"

The poor fellow's voice faltered, and his eyes met mine imploringly. He and I had been fast friends in my boyhood, and our friendship was still firm and true. I shook his hand heartily—a grip which he returned with his fingers of iron till my own tingled again.

"I knew you'd come," he gasped. "Ah, I'll go, Tardif," I said. "Only I must get a snatch of something to eat while Dr. Dobree puts up what I shall have need of. I'll be ready in half an hour."

The tide was with us, and carried us over buoyantly. We anchored at the fishermen's landing place below the cliff of the Havre Gosselin, and I climbed readily up the rough ladder which leads to the path. Tardif made his boat secure, and followed me; he passed me, and strode on up the steep track to the summit of the cliff, as if impatient to reach his home. It was then that I gave my first serious thought to the woman who had met with the accident.

"Tardif, who is this person that is hurt?" I asked, "and whereabouts did she fall?"

"She fell down yonder," he answered, pointing to a rough and rather high portion of the cliff running inland; "the stones rolled from under her feet so," he added, crushing down a quantity of the loose gravel with his foot, "and she slipped. She lay on the shingle unobserved for two hours before I found her—two hours, Dr. Martin!"

Tardif's mother came to us as we entered the house. She beckoned me to follow her into an inner room. It was small, with a ceiling of low, it seemed to rest upon the four posts of the bedstead. There were of course none of the little dainty luxuries about it, with which I was familiar in my mother's bedroom. A long low window opposite the head of the bed threw a strong light upon it. There were check curtains drawn round it, and a patchwork quilt, and rough, home-spun linen. Everything was clean, but coarse and frugal, such as I expected to find about my Sark patient, in the home of a fisherman.

But when my eye fell upon the face resting on the rough pillow, I paused involuntarily, only that controlling an exclamation of surprise. There was absolutely nothing in the surroundings to mark her as a lady, yet I felt in a moment that she was one. There lay a delicate refined face, white as the linen, with beautiful lips almost as white; and a mass of light, shining, silky hair tossed about the pillow; and large dark gray eyes gazing at me beseechingly, with an expression that made my heart leap as it had never leapt before.

That was what I saw, and could not forget seeing. I tried to close my eyes to the pathetic beauty of the face before me; but it was altogether in vain. If I had seen her before, or if I had been prepared to see any one like her, I might have succeeded; but I was completely thrown off my guard. There the charming face lay; the eyes gleaming, the white forehead tinted, and the delicate mouth contracting with pain; the bright light curls tossed about in confusion. I see it now, just as I saw it then.

CHAPTER IV.

I suppose I did not stand still more than five seconds, yet during that pause a host of questions had dashed through my brain. Who was this beautiful creature? Where had she come from? How did it happen that she was in Tardif's house? and so on. But I recalled myself sharply to my senses; I was here as her physician, and common sense and duty commanded me to keep my head clear. I advanced to her side and took the small, blue-veined hand into mine, and felt her pulse with my fingers.

"You are in very great pain, I fear," I said, lowering my voice.

"Yes," her white lips answered, and she tried to smile a patient though a distressed smile, as she looked up at me.

were too far unstrung for me to venture across the long, narrow lathum. I turned abruptly again, and hurried as fast as my legs would carry me back to Tardif's cottage.

I had been away less than an hour, but an advantage had been taken of my absence. I found Tardif seated at the table, with a tangle of silky, shining hair lying before him. A tear or two had fallen upon it from his eyes. I understood at a glance what it meant. Mother Renou, whom he had secured as a nurse, had cut off my patient's pretty curls as soon as I was out of the house.

Tardif's great hand caressed them tenderly, and I drew out one long, glossy tress and wound it about my finger, with a heavy heart.

"It is like the pretty feathers of a bird that has been wounded," said Tardif sorrowfully.

Just then there came a knock at the door and a sharp click of the latch, loud enough to penetrate dame Tardif's deaf ears, or to arouse our patient, if she had been sleeping. Before either of us could move the door was thrust open and two young ladies appeared upon the door sill.

They were—I flashed across me in an instant—old school fellows, and friends of Julia's. I declare to you honestly I had scarcely had one thought of Julia till now. My mother I had wished for, to take her place by this poor girl's side, but Julia had hardly crossed my mind. Why, in heaven's name, should the appearance of these friends of hers be so distasteful to me just now? I had known them all my life, and liked them as well as any girls I knew; but at this moment the very sight of them was annoying.

They stood in the doorway, as much astonished and thunderstruck as I was, staring at me, so it seemed to me, with that soft, bright brown look of hair curling and clinging round my finger. Never had I felt so foolish or guilty.

American Coal the Best.

"Ever since I was a boy I have been reminded of the old story about 'carrying coals to Newcastle,' whenever I performed unnecessary tasks," said Richard Barker of Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, in the lobby of the Shoreham last night. "To carry coals to Newcastle was supposed to be as futile a task as trying to sweep back the waves on the seashore. I have lived to see coals carried to Newcastle, however, and, being an Englishman, it grieves me to say that the coals in question came all the way from America."

"Within the last few years an enormous amount of coal has been shipped from Norfolk, Va., to various parts of England. Some of it went to Portsmouth, to the naval station there, and many tons were sent to Newcastle. We have better facilities for handling coal there than any other place in the United Kingdom. For many years it has been the center of the coal mining industry of our country and consequently the arrangements and appliances for shipping fuel to various parts of the country are away ahead of those of other towns."

The coal that comes from the western portion of the State of Virginia—soft coal, I mean—is the finest fuel for steamships that is mined anywhere in the world. The coal seems to produce more steam from a small quantity than any I have seen. It is now used extensively on the vessels of the British navy and from what I saw a week ago in Norfolk and Newport News I should judge that the shipment must amount to millions of tons per year.—Washington Times.

A German Picture of the Future.

Scene—A schoolroom of the twentieth century.

Teacher (to a new scholar)—"Jack, are you inoculated against croup?"

Pupil—"Yes, sir."

"Have you been inoculated with the cholera bacillus?"

"Yes, sir."

"Have you a written certificate that you are immune as to whooping cough, measles and scarlatina?"

"Yes, sir, I have."

"Have you your own drinking cup?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you promise not to exchange sponges with your neighbor, and to use no slate pencil but your own?"

"Yes, sir."

"Will you agree to have your books fumigated every week with sulphur, and to have your clothes sprinkled with chloride of lime?"

"Yes, sir."

"Then, Jack, you possess all that modern hygiene requires; you can step over that wire, occupy an isolated seat made of aluminum, and begin your arithmetic lesson."

All Named the Same Date.

Hall—Well, good-by. Come and see me some time.

Story—Awfully sorry, old boy; but I've got over a hundred engagements that day.

Hall—A hundred engagements? Nonsense!

Story—Fact. Within a few days I've received over a hundred invitations to friends' houses and in every case "some time" was the date mentioned.—Boston Transcript.

"Sure not. I'm lookin' fur work fur me wife."—Philadelphia Record.

Oldest Physician.

Gallus Ritter von Hockberger, imperial and royal councillor of the Austrian court, is believed to be the oldest truly qualified physician in the world. He was born on Oct. 15, 1803, and is therefore 77 years of age. He has been practicing for seventy-one years, and still gives medical advice.

NO EXTRA SESSION.

ANNOUNCED THAT CONGRESS WILL NOT BE CALLED.

Cabinet Holds that President's Military Authority is Ample for All Purposes in the Philippines—Methods in Conformity with Court Decisions.

Washington correspondence: There will be no extra session of Congress. That much at least was decided at the cabinet meeting Tuesday.

Secretary Root and Attorney General Knox united in expressing the opinion that there was nothing in the recent decisions of the Supreme Court which need alter in any material degree the plans already laid down for the government of the Philippines. A form of civil government for the islands will be established as soon after July 1 as it can possibly be done. There will be a deviation from the original plan only so far as regards the question of theory. The Spooner resolution is not to be relied upon at all. On the contrary, the civil government to be established by the Taft commission will act under the authority of the war power of the government. It will create municipal and provisional governments, but each of these will derive its authority from the powers of the President as commander-in-chief.

There will be no limit to the free exercise of the civil government in the Philippines, and after a while it will be entirely independent of a military commander. It has been held that the President can govern the islands without question by the exercise of his military authority, while it is an open question how far he can go in this direction under the delegated authority he acquired from the Spooner resolution.

For the present at least the Dingley rates will be enforced in San Francisco and other United States ports against Manila, and the rates of duties in the islands will be those fixed by the old Spanish tariff as modified by the military orders of Gen. Otis and his successors.

It will be remembered that the Supreme Court, in its decisions, held that the tariff promulgated by Gen. Miles, as a military commander in Porto Rico, was entirely legal, because it was a proper and even necessary exercise of the war power. The administration is, therefore, proceeding on this same theory. It assumes that the Philippines are not yet actually in the possession of the United States, and hence a government under the military power is actually a necessity to provide for the well being of the people. The civil government to be established by the Taft commission will be nominally under control of the military authorities, but in reality will be independent.

It will be analogous to the municipal and provincial governments in Cuba, which derive their authority from the commanding general, although the people themselves administer them. In this respect, the Philippine government will be distinctly different from that created for Porto Rico under the Foraker law.

This difference, it will be observed, is much more one of theory than of actual fact. The original instructions to the Taft commission have been revised and will form the temporary constitution of the island. In manifest disproof of the theories that the administration is proceeding along arbitrary lines, it is extremely timely to note that these instructions to the Philippine commission, written by the President, include certain inviolable rules for the government of the Philippines. These rules, which cannot be violated by the commission or by any one else, are in fact a mere transcript of the bill of rights of the constitution of the United States.

KILL IN DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Burglars Extruded from Chicago Stay a Toronto Constable.

An almost unparalleled attempt of captured criminals to escape was made in Toronto Tuesday night, with the result that a constable was shot dead, one of the criminals badly wounded, and two of his associates hurt. It is believed that a woman, disguised as a man, threw two revolvers into a carriage in which three burglars recently extradited from Chicago were being taken from court to jail.

The men were Frank Rutledge, Fred Rice and Frank Jones, who were on trial for a robbery committed at the small town of Aurora, a few miles north of Toronto.

There were four in the band originally, and they were accused of a series of bank and postoffice burglaries committed in Toronto and its vicinity last year. They escaped to Chicago, where Rutledge, Rice and Jones were arrested. The fourth was never caught. After a hard legal fight they were extradited.

They were daily conveyed in a cab from the jail to the court house and back. At about 7 o'clock at night the cab was moving slowly along Gerrard street to the jail, the prisoners chained together, and under the charge of Constables Boyd and Stewart, when a man, or, as suspected, a woman in man's clothing, ran alongside the cab and handed in two pistols, one of which Rutledge grabbed and Jones the other. The two began firing at the constables, the second bullet entering Boyd's temple, causing instant death.

In the confusion the prisoners got out of the cab and boarded a street car, which had stopped on the conductor hearing the shooting.

The prisoners tried to put power on the motorman snatched off his brake handle and felled Rutledge, the conductor assaulting the other two and knocking them senseless. The shooting had attracted the police, who came up speedily with revolvers ready. The three men were taken to the jail, where it was found that Jones had a bad wound. The burglars are now in jail charged with murder.

The Hard-to-Reach North Pole.

Many attempts are now being made to discover the north pole by adventurous explorers, the last among them being Capt. Bernier of Quebec, who will take with him strong kites fitted with cameras, by which, even if he fails to get near the pole, he purposes to take photographs of such points as he cannot reach.

The success that has attended the use of the camera by the aid of kites at great heights leads him to believe that the method may be practicable in the Arctic regions.

POINTS IN HERRON'S LETTER TO THE CHURCH.

Prof. Herron's letter to the Church Council contained these striking sentences:

1. Such a crisis might come to a life without any one being morally to blame.
2. I did not desert my children. I have long held it a principle that children first belong to their mother.
3. I do not believe the present marriage system is sacred or good.
4. No law in the universe has the right to keep together those who are not vitally and essentially one.
5. It is not the business of society to unite or separate men and women in the marriage relation.
6. I will not live a lie—not to win or keep the favor of gods or men.
7. After I have lived so many years because she (his present wife) has lived also, for me to leave her to face the world would be for me to commit spiritual suicide.

HERRON IS CAST OUT.

Council of Congregationalists at Grinnell Deposes Him.

The Congregational council of the Grinnell (Iowa) district reached the unanimous verdict in executive session that George D. Herron is guilty of immoral and unchristian conduct; that he be dropped from the membership of the First Congregational Church of Grinnell and that he shall no longer be considered a Congregational minister of the gospel in good and regular standing.

Spurred from the ministry of his church, repudiated by the college faculty of which he was a member, expelled from the church even recommended, George D. Herron stands convicted of immoral and unchristian conduct, infamous treatment and heartless desertion of the wife and children who lived and suffered for him. The Congregational council, a jury of his peers in the church, after reading the defense which he offered, declared it their belief that he had convicted himself of deliberately falsifying his marriage vows and that his selected defense was an exploitation of his views upon the marriage question, which are "abhorrent to enlightened Christian sentiment."

PROF. HERRON. MRS. HERRON. THE DIVORCED WIFE.

ed himself of deliberately falsifying his marriage vows and that his selected defense was an exploitation of his views upon the marriage question, which are "abhorrent to enlightened Christian sentiment."

Next to the verdict, the most interesting feature of the trial was a lengthy communication from Herron accepting in advance the decision of the council. In this letter he sought to justify on theoretical grounds the rectitude of his conduct. He announced that henceforth his efforts would be devoted to "the Socialist revolution." The letter inveighed against the "conventional" domestic which trammel men's actions today, and declared that the writer's life was one of truth and honesty as against the selfish superstitions which guided the course of his accusers.

It was proved to the satisfaction of the council that Mrs. Herron did not initiate the divorce proceedings. Tortured by years of flagrant and studied neglect, herself and her children daily insulted by the patronage and presence of the woman who had led Herron away from his family, the patient wife, yet hoping that her supreme devotion and unflinching loyalty would win him back, refused to resort to the divorce courts. A woman teacher at Grinnell College who was classmate of Mary Eberhart in the old days at Ripon, Wis., when George Herron, then a student, wooed and won her, told the council that the divorce proceedings, while technically coming from the wife, were prompted, urged and even forced by Prof. Herron.

Admiral Cervera Alarmed for Spain.
Speaking before the naval Congress recently in Madrid on the subject whether or not Spain should be a naval power, Admiral Cervera expressed fears of the disintegration of Spain into a number of small States. Concluding a strong appeal for the maintenance of power upon the sea he said: "I do not wish that the interests of the navy should predominate at the expense of the other interests of the country, but, observing, as I do, what is going on at the present day, I am afraid Spain may become like the Italy of the middle ages."

ANTIOCH, ILLINOIS.

There is more or less silly talk on the tariff question now being presented. To take for granted because President McKinley favors the extension of our foreign trade by reciprocity treaties, wherever possible, that he is any less a believer in a protective tariff than he ever was is to ignore facts. Reciprocity is the child of protection. It is because we have a protective tariff that we have something to offer nations for commercial reciprocity.

One of the significant signs of the times is the presence in this country of many European manufacturing experts, who are here to study methods, with a view to making improvements in their own, in order to better meet our trade rivalry. They will doubtless carry back valuable pointers, but they cannot carry back the greatest single factor in the success of American manufacturers—the intelligent American workman, who knows how to use his brains as well as his hands.

President McKinley's prompt rejection of the fake acceptance of the Platt amendment by the Cuban Constitutional Convention is commended by the people and press of the entire country, and if the Cubans are wise they will lose no time in properly accepting the Platt amendment without any "ifs" or "ands."

Br'er Bryan's hold on the democratic party gets weaker every day. Proof of this may be found in the steadily increasing number of democrats of more or less prominence who are publicly declaring against Bryanism. Hon. F. M. O'Ferrall, ex-Governor and ex-Congressman of Va., is among the latest.

Georgia is at last realizing that it owes a debt to the memory of Eli Whitney, inventor of the cotton gin; but it will not be paid by converting his old home into a "country club," as now proposed by an organization in that state.

There is a difference. When General Chaffee left Pekin, a petition signed by prominent Chinese asking him to remain was presented to him; when Count Walden left, everybody was glad to see him go.

Of course, there will be wars in the future, but it is a consolation to know that the strength of the U. S., both in material resources and fighting men, make it a nation that no other will willingly attack.

With two such able legal advisers as Attorney General Knox and Secretary Root, President McKinley cannot fail to acquire full knowledge of the effect of the recent Supreme Court decisions.

Canada has granted a subsidy to a steamship line from Montreal to Havre, France, which is another argument in favor of the passage of the Ship Subsidy bill by Congress.

If President McKinley decides that an extra session of Congress is necessary he will not allow his own comfort or that of Congressmen to stand in the way.

The democratic wrangles in Virginia give the republicans a good fighting chance to carry the state if it had an election that was even passably fair.

The London Telegraph says plans for European industrial coalition against the U. S. are idle dreams so far as any British participation is concerned.

The U. S. Supreme Court is always harshly criticised when it makes an important decision; but that does not affect the legality of the decision.

Mr. Bryan has had a relapse and his imperialistic fever is worse than ever. Poor fellow! His suffering is acute, but Dr. Time will cure him.

Senator Tillman is disposed to regard Gov. McSwain's advice as an attempt to put rubber balls on the points of his pitchfork.

PEARL LITTLE PASSES AWAY.

The death of Amy Pearl Little, daughter of officer Melvin B. Little, occurred Saturday morning, June 8, at 9:25 o'clock at her home, 1004 Rockton avenue.

Funeral services were held Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Court Street M. E. church, the Rev. B. E. S. Ely officiating. The pall-bearers were selected from among members of the Sunday school and honorary bearers were chosen from the teachers in the city schools.

The passing away of Miss Little brings grief to many hearts, who mourn that she has been taken when the future had so much promise for her. Of undoubted ability in her profession of teaching, strong in character, a young woman of high ideals and broad sympathies, she was making much of her life. She had a firm, but gentle influence for good upon all with whom she came in contact and she had drawn about her many warm friends to whom her death is a sad blow.

Miss Little was born near Burr Oak, Winnebago county, Iowa, Oct. 10, 1874. Her parents removed to this city in 1884, and she finished her education here, graduating from the high school when she was 20 years of age. She immediately took up the work of teaching and secured a place on the city staff. During the five years or more she had followed this profession she had been in the Adams school, with the exception of a brief period in the Brown school.

Her illness began about seven weeks ago, when she was stricken with nervous prostration. She gave up her work, but grew steadily worse. Ten days ago she was forced to take to her bed, which she was destined not to leave in life. Unrelenting care was given her by her family, but the progress of the disease which sapped her vitality could not be stayed.

Miss Little's mother died five years after the family came to Rockford. Besides her father she is survived by one sister, Mrs. Bessie Novine, of this city. She had made her home for several years with Mrs. Juliette Wemple.

Miss Little had been a member of Court Street church for 15 years and was a teacher in the Sunday school. She was much interested in religious work and entered into it with a genuineness and loyalty which had much influence upon those about her. In this society especially she had many friends, her worth impressing itself upon them every day they came in contact with her. She had the love of her pupils in her school work the confidence of her superiors and she was looked upon as one of the most valuable teachers in the city's employ.

The grim reaper is no respecter of persons. The young as well as the old must obey his mandate. But brief as was the span of the young woman's life she so lived it that there remains a fragrant memory. —The Morning Star, (Rockford, Ill.) June 9th, 1901.

Miss Little was a daughter of Mr. M. B. Little, a former resident of this place and will be remembered by many of our people.

GRADUATED.

Notwithstanding the unfavorable weather the opera house was well filled last Wednesday evening to witness the class of 1901 do the final act. The stage was tastefully decorated with the class colors and flowers, and at eight o'clock the class marched to their positions on the stage. The scene was a beautiful one and will long be remembered by many present. The graduating themes had been given the day before at the high school rooms. The program, as published in THE NEWS last week, was carried out. The salutatory was presented in the most feeling manner by Miss Mary Blair and all were made to feel welcome. Wm. O. Blair gave a unique class history that was enjoyed by all, especially those interested. Harvey M. Mann presented the valedictory in a forcible way, and his farewell to teacher and schoolmates was feelingly expressed. The class received their diplomas, presented by Rev. E. J. Aikin, and the curtain dropped on the first part of the program.

After a few minutes for change and preparation the drama, "Adrift," was presented by members of the class assisted by some others. The characters were well portrayed and the play was enjoyed by all who witnessed it. Tom McGreal and Lena Drury as Japs and Phillips, were decided hits. Harvey Mann, as the crazy man in the street scene, was very good. John Turner, as the villain, Ben Emmons, as the lawyer, Dean Wisner, as the drunkard, Marston Taylor, as Tim, all did their parts well, while Frank Keller and Oliver Cubbon made capital policemen. Gertrude Smart and Laura Williams did their parts to perfection and Bertha James, as the little daughter, was very good. The exercises lasted about two hours and all present seemed interested and entertained.

Members of the class received some beautiful flowers and some nice presents. Among the presents was a beautiful toilet set for Mr. Manley from the class of 1901. So ended the work of another school year.

A Good Cough Medicine.

It speaks well for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy when druggists use it in their own families in preference to any other. "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for the past five years with complete satisfaction to myself and customers," says Druggist J. Goldsmith, Van Etten, N. Y. "I have always used it in my own family both for ordinary coughs and colds and for the cough following a gripe, and find it very efficacious." For sale by W. H. Emmons, Antioch, and Thomson's Pharmacy.

Seven Years in Bed.

"Will wonders ever cease?" inquire the friends of Mrs. L. Pease, of Lawrence, Kan. They knew she had been unable to leave her bed in seven years on account of Kidney and Liver trouble, nervous prostration and general debility; but "three bottles of Electric Bitters enabled me to walk," she writes, "and in three months I felt like a new person." Women suffering from Headache, Backache, Nervousness, Sleeplessness, Melancholy, Fainting and Dizziness will find it a priceless blessing. Try it. Satisfaction is guaranteed. Only 50c. at Hill's drug store.

Northern Wisconsin Railroad Lands

are increasing in value from year to year. Railroads are the great civilization, for they give the settler as well as the manufacturer equal opportunity to work in undeveloped fields, thereby rapidly settling the country and bringing forth its undiscovered riches. Northern Wisconsin is rich in iron ore, clay, kaolin, marl, timber and fine farm lands. It has made many a settler independent and added to the wealth of manufacturers who have sought this territory. Opportunities have not passed, as there is still a generous supply of land which can be obtained at low figures and on easy terms.

A Terrible Explosion

"Of a gasoline stove burned a lady here frightfully," writes N. E. Palmer, of Kirkman, Ia. "The best doctors couldn't heal the running sore that followed, but Bucklen's Arnica Salve entirely cured her. Infallible for Cuts, Corns, Sores, Boils, Bruises, Skin Diseases and Piles. 25 cents at Hill's drug store."

Servant Leaves Snug Sam.

Caroline L. Jones, a servant in the same rich Brooklyn family for over a dozen years, died last week, leaving $4,000, which she had accumulated and made in small speculations. She left it all to her aged employer, Captain William B. Hilton, and now relatives with whom she never could agree are fighting to obtain possession of her savings.

King of Greece Handles Flour.

A pleasant way of spending some of the summer months is that adopted by the king of Greece. He turns farmer and works as hard as if he were a land laborer. He can plow a field, cut and bind corn—in short, keep a farm going from start to finish, as though it were his business.

Negroes Leave the Carolinas.

The exodus of negroes from the Carolinas as a result of recent restrictive legislation is crowding the labor market in Maryland to such an extent that much anxiety is felt as to the outcome. Since 1890 the negro registration in Maryland has increased 12,000 and is now 25 per cent of the whole.

HIS LIFE SAVED

By Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

"I am sure that Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy at one time saved my life," says A. E. Lafayette, of Gregory Landing, Clark Co., Mo. "I was in such bad shape that the doctors said I could not live. When I was at the lowest ebb, one of my neighbors brought in a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and I took it and got instant relief. I soon got up and around. That was nine years ago and I am still in good health. Since then that medicine has always been in my house and always will be. It is the best on earth." For sale by W. H. Emmons, Antioch, and Thomson's Pharmacy, Grayslake.

Fruits for Children.

For children especially fruits in their season are an ideal diet, and should be conscientiously insisted upon. A small bill for the doctor would buy fruit for a long time. One who makes a business of the study of such matters says that the value of fruit is fresh, canned, preserved or dried. "It," says Professor Allen, "one-half the meat, one-fourth the bread, and all the candy given to children could be made to give place to fruit, the death rate among the children would be greatly reduced, their bodies would be better formed, and they would be more healthy than most of them now are."

Saves Two From Death.

"Our little daughter had an almost fatal attack of whooping cough and bronchitis," writes Mrs. W. K. Haviland, of Armonk, N. Y., "but, when all other remedies failed, we saved her life with Dr. King's New Discovery. Our niece who had consumption in advanced stage, also used this wonderful medicine and to-day she is perfectly well." Desperate throat and lung disease yield to Dr. King's New Discovery as to no other medicine on earth. Infallible for Coughs and Colds. 50c and $1.00 bottles guaranteed by W. T. Hill. Trial bottles free.

Rich Receive Begging Letters.

It is well known that wealthy men and their families are continually annoyed by begging letters of all kinds. A daughter of one extremely rich man said a few days ago that her father's aversion to "character studies" of him in magazines and articles with regard to him anywhere, was largely due to the fact that whenever one of these articles appeared, it was but the suggestion for a vast flood of begging letters, in addition to the ordinary stream.—New York Evening Sun.

Bunching Law Points.

An Illinois attorney argued to the court one after another a series of very weak points, none of which seemed to the court to have any merit, until the court finally said: "Mr. —, do you think there is anything in these points?" To which the attorney replied: "Well, judge, perhaps there isn't much in any one of them alone, but I didn't know but your Honor would kind of bunch them."—Case and Comment.

Practiced Medicine Despite Opposition.

Dr. Hannah W. Longshore, the first woman to practice medicine in Philadelphia, has just celebrated her 82d birthday. She has been a physician in the Quaker city for half a century and was born there. In her youth she was a remarkably handsome woman, besides being of amazing pluck, for her early work as a doctor was accomplished in the face of constant opposition, ridicule and prejudice.

Great and Little Sorrows.

Griefs are like the bells that endure them—the little ones are the most clamorous and noisy; those of older growth and greater magnitude are generally tranquil and sometimes silent. Our minds are like ill-hung vehicles; when they have little to carry they make a prodigious clatter, but when heavily laden they neither creak nor rumble.

Massachusetts' Single Tax Proposal.

At the coming session of the Massachusetts legislature a bill will be offered giving to each city and town the privilege of raising money for municipal purposes by such methods as the town or city may deem best. This is the single tax proposal which was defeated in the last bay state legislature.

Mr. James Brown of Putnam, V., over 90 years of age, suffered for years with a bad sore on his face. Physicians could not help him. DeWitt's Witch-Hazel Salve cured him permanently. Wm. T. Hill.

A TOWN UNDERMINED.

When Buildings Sink They Are Elevated on Jackscrews and Rest.

The remarkable subsidences which have often occurred in and around the town of Northwich, in Cheshire, England, form the subject of a paper by T. Ward, recently issued by the Institution of Mining Engineers. The subsidences are chiefly due to mining in the upper bed of rock salt and the too rapid removal of brine by means of modern pumps. In a natural condition the water in or on the salt beds becomes saturated with salt and then ceases to dissolve it, but now the brine is continually pumped up in immense quantities, and the fresh water which flows to take its place dissolves the salt pillars, which have supported the roof and over-lying strata, with the result that there is a depression toward each pumping center. In almost every case the mines in the upper bed of rock salt are destroyed by water rapidly eroding the salt pillars in this way. Another cause of subsidence is the pumping of brine from off the rockhead; that is, the surface of the upper bed of rock salt. These are by far the most serious and widespread, and it is from them that the town of Northwich suffers so much damage. Owing to the subsidences, which show themselves first by small cracks in the buildings and in doors and windows refusing to shut, a system of framework buildings has been allowed, so that when a building sinks it can be lifted by screw-jacks and put back to its original position. By degrees the town is becoming one of framework buildings, and will, for England, be unique in this respect.—Nature.

Helen Gould's Only Sport.

Bowling is about the only sport Miss Helen Gould cares about, and in order to be able to entertain bowling parties on a magnificent scale she built a beautiful bowling alley at Lyndhurst, her country home at Irvington-on-the-Hudson. The building stands at some distance from her house, on the river's bank, and is perhaps the most complete establishment of its kind in the world. There is the regulation alley, which takes up the center of the building. At either end are round-overs; on the first floor of each, opening from the alley, are reception rooms, delightfully cosy, with easy chairs, divans and huge fireplaces. A wide veranda on one side overlooks the tennis court; in summer a roof garden is a feature of the place, with awnings, growing plants, and the most beautiful of views—a charming place for the cup of afternoon tea or a moonlight reverie.—Leslie's Weekly.

Ice on Bottom of Sea.

In the Baltic Sea and in many northern regions the lower water is so much colder than the water at the surface that ice forms at the bottom while the surface waters seem warm. This phenomenon puzzled scientists for many years. The ice formed in small cakes or flakes and rises to the top, where it melts if the weather is warm or the cake freezes into a solid mass if the weather is cold. Scientists have discovered that the phenomenon is due to an undercurrent of very low temperature. Boatmen, when they see the ice cakes rising to the surface, hurriedly take to the shore if frigid weather exists; for otherwise their boats would be rapidly ice bound, and they would be unable to escape.

Temperatures of the Higher Air.

Recent balloon ascensions have furnished the following data: A balloon sent up at Cracow to a height of 4,000 meters (13,123 feet) registered a minimum temperature of 23.9 degrees C. (11 degrees Fahr.). A balloon from Berlin rose to 9,480 meters, (31,135 feet) and registered 55 degrees C. (67 degrees Fahr.). A balloon from a point near Paris rose to 12,700 meters (41,665 feet) and registered 55 degrees C. A balloon sent up at Strasburg rose to 8,000 meters (26,247 feet) and registered 45 degrees C. (109 degrees Fahr.). Other ascensions at Vienna and Berlin gave results agreeing with the foregoing.

Greek Origin of Word Academy.

Academy was a wealthy Greek of Athens who lived several hundred years before the birth of Christ. Among his possessions was a beautiful grove, where young men used to congregate and listen to the teachings of wise men, such as Plato and Socrates. This developed into the school of modern times, and these modern schools take their name "academy" from the old Greek, Academeus. The real meaning of the word academy is a school for boys.

The "District" Divorce Law.

The new divorce laws of the District of Columbia is one of the strongest in the Union, as good as that in New York. It allows absolute divorce only on Scriptural grounds, with permission to remarry to the innocent party, cases of drunkenness, cruelty and desertion being allowed the remedy of legal separation.—Ram's Horn.

HOW A SEA TURTLE FEEDS.

He Takes a Big Ball of Grass Out to Sea with Him.

With my gastronomic taste, I naturally was very curious to know just what kind of terrapin are caught in these waters, for the dish is one much sought after by epicures, and forms part of the menu of every first class hotel on the coast. I was told that none were caught about here, but was invited to a sea turtle hunt. Let the reader imagine a turtle weighing all the way from 1,200 to 1,500 pounds—and not long ago one was turned over on the beach near Miami that weighed more than 1,800 pounds—of course, I am giving the largest weight, for the average weight of those caught along the coast is 500 pounds. After they are caught the turtles are kept for a long time, their captors feeding them on cabbages, lettuce, turnips, carrots and sea grasses, writes a Florida correspondent for the Baltimore American. The study of this monster shellfish is a most interesting one. In order to get rid of the parasites that cling to their shells they often enter fresh water streams to enjoy a bath, but they are extremely timid and take fright at the least noise. The hunter knows, however, that the turtle feeds in brackish streams, where the tide falls rather low and where the turtle grass grows in great profusion. The turtles cut great quantities of this grass and then roll it into a ball, cementing it as they roll it with the clay in which the grass grows; and in this way, when they have managed to amass a goodly supply of provision, they wait for high tide and float away seaward, feeding as they float. The professional hunters are quick to detect these balls, and just the moment they do so they set their seines and send their peggers, as the men are called, in search of the feeding shoals. Men are not the only enemies the turtles have, however, for bears, raccoons and other animals native to Florida destroy great numbers of them.

Gymnasiums in America.

Much that was said by teachers of physical culture at their recent convention in New York deserves a wider audience than the gathering of specialists to whom it was addressed. The mere statistics are interesting. Physical training in some form or other is now provided in 270 American colleges, by the public schools of 300 cities and in about 500 Young Men's Christian Association gymnasiums. The North American Turnbund has 300 gymnasiums, and there are several hundred others in army and navy posts, police stations, missions, fire engine houses and industrial schools; while thousands of clubs foster special interests as bicycling, boating, golf, tennis, baseball and football.

Readers Like an Hour-Glass.

Some readers are like the hour-glass—their reading is as the sand. It runs in and runs out, but leaves not a vestige behind. Some like a sponge, which imbibes everything, and returns it in the same state, only a little dirtier. Some like a jelly-bag, which allows all that is pure to pass away, and retains only the refuse and dregs. The fourth class may be compared to the slave of Golconda, who casting away all that is worthless, preserves only the pure gems.—Coleridge.

Clips from Campaigns.

Senator Benton, it is said, once addressed a public meeting as follows: "Ladies and gentlemen, there are the sages of the past and the sages of the future. I stand before you tonight the connecting link between the sages of the past and the sages of the future, and soon I, too, will be numbered with the sages of the past." But Col. Crisp's great speech at a local democratic convention beat that all to pieces. The delegates were wild with tumult. Col. Crisp shouted: "Silence, you Kansas City jackals, and hear the lion roar!"

Town Gets Portraits.

Fairfax Courthouse, Va., has been presented recently with the portraits of distinguished men who were associated with the place in its early history, including one of Washington, which was presented by Prof. R. F. Andrews of the Corcoran Art Gallery, and one of George Mason, author of the "Bill of Rights," presented by Carl Guntheur of Washington.

Opinion of German Emperor.

When the dowager empress of Germany first came to the Berlin court, it was remarked to Baron Humboldt, then an old man of 90, that the prince, her husband, deferred to her in everything. "Very properly so," replied the great scientist; "she is the wiser man of the two."

DIET IN CONVALESCENCE.

In Fever Cases the Food Should be Selected with Care.

Convalescents who have long, protracted illness, upon finally being careful in resuming solid diet, for the rapidity of recuperation of the digestive organs varies very much in different persons, and taking meats, or other solid foods, too soon may cause a rise in temperature, rapid heart action and, possibly, visceral congestion. The first meat given, therefore, should be prepared in a finely subdivided state, such as chopped beef or minced chicken. During convalescence from protracted fevers the more easily digested forms of starchy foods are the most useful, especially if there has been loss of weight. Sago and tapioca thoroughly cooked and served with cream, and dried breadcrumbs cooked in milk, or meat broth are very nutritious. Crackers and zwieback are useful. Custard puddings, cooked fruit and beef jelly, blanc mange or baked custard may be allowed. Poached eggs on toast, milk punch, raw or stewed oysters, beef or chicken broth, broths with rice, cream of celery soup, wine jelly, tea, cocoa, eggnog, buttered toast, milk toast, soft-cooked eggs, baked apples, stewed prunes may be given. After three or four days, a small mutton chop or a piece of broiled tender beefsteak may be allowed the convalescent; also sweet breads, calf's brain, orange jelly, sponge cake, broiled birds. For convalescence, champagne, sherry, madeira or good claret may be given in some cases with advantage.—Mrs. Geasne Lemcke in Ledger Monthly.

THEY PURCHASE OUR PICTURES.

Great American Painters All Represented in French Art Galleries.

I am no great admirer of the French government of the day, for I am too good a patriot to believe in cosmopolitanism and I have never seen anything admirable in breaking church windows. When I was a youngster there was one bad boy in our neighborhood. I know he was bad because he used to throw stones at the minister's cat. The socialists and internationalists who rule France today are too much like that bad boy to suit my conservative tastes. Still they are good men in their way. Their theories aside, they act like decent fellows, instructed, art-loving men and Frenchmen. Every now and then the government announces that it has bought some picture and—by placing it in a public gallery—given it to the people and the world. Not one great American painter of the day is unrepresented in the national art galleries of France. Look at the Luxembourg, with its collection—finer than any in the United States—of pictures by our best men, Whistler, Sargent and a score of others. He, too, works for his country who only stands and paints.

However, while the best of the great American artists' work is being bought in by the French government to enrich France, the government of our own country is quite unconcerned. And in a few years what would we not give for Whistler's Portrait of My Mother, for Walden's Captain Docks, for Sargent's Carmichael—a king's ransom, my friends. And that is the right kind of patriotism—the national preservation of the works of our men have made. It makes for the future. Seed may be sown on a canvass as well as on the prairies of the middle west. All this means that the French government has bought, for $100,000, the last Salon picture—that should have gone to the new home of art that some statesman will found some day or other in Washington, D. C.—Saturday Post.

A CURIOUS NARRATIVE.

An Incident That Led to a Chapter's Composition.

In the tiny hamlet of Muggington there is a quaint Palladian chapel, about fifteen feet square, which is commonly known as Halter Devil chapel. The story is a bad one, says the Derby (England) Mercury. Francis Brown, who had a bad reputation both for drunkenness and for feeding his horses at the expense of his neighbors, went forth one night to bring home a trusty steed and in spite of drink and darkness found the animal without difficulty. On reaching home and bringing out the lantern he found the halter was round the neck of a horned beast, which conscience suggested must be the devil himself. He repented of his evil deed and by way of atonement, a chapel was built on the site of the farm, which was situated on a hill and of land taken into Muggington. The adjoining parish of Hales, the Muggington trustees attempt at classing the chapel as a place of worship, but the trustees of the chapel, which the little chapel, Jacksonville, contrasts strangely enough the defendant farm buildings to which it is Court in it is said that it has never been created or licensed, but a chapel is in it once a month and for the rental of some seventeen pounds, which form the endowment of a table in the pediment of the action are the lines:

"Francis Brown in his old age, having built him here this hermitage, etc." The register of Muggington parish contains the following entry: "1780, June 11th, Francis Brown, of Hales, Ward, buried. Intakes Founder of Chapel in 7th Intakes Ward, to be annexed to Muggington forever, after death of his widow, his daughter and her husband, Edward Allen."

A Mother's True Friend

"I would like to express my gratitude for the benefit received from your wonderful medicine, Favorite Prescription," writes Mrs. H. C. Anderson, of South Britain, New Haven Co., Conn. (Box 33). "During the first month of pregnancy I could not keep anything on my stomach. Was so sick that I had to go to bed and stay for weeks. I tried different doctors, but with little benefit. I read about many being helped by using your medicine so I thought I would give it a trial. I began to take your Favorite Prescription in November and I had a nice little baby girl in February following. My baby weighed over eight pounds. I was only in hard labor about one hour and got along nicely during confinement; was up and dressed on the eighth day. I never had the doctor with me at all. My friends thought that I was sick a very short time. I think Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is indeed a mother's true friend, for it helped me wonderfully."

Raise the Calves.

Evidently there is a better chance for profit now in growing young stock either for the dairy or for beef than at any time in the past ten years, and perhaps in the last twenty years. But we have the statistics for the past ten years as sent out by the Agricultural Department at Washington. In 1890 there were in the United States 39,840,024 cattle. In 1895, 34,304,210. Since that time there has been a steady decrease of about two million head per year, until in 1899 there were but 27,874,225. In 1890 there were 680 cattle to each one thousand inhabitants, and in 1899 only 873 to each thousand. As the number has decreased the price has increased. The reports of the Kansas City stock yards show the following prices for prime steers on Aug. 10 for three years: In 1897, $4.80 per hundred pounds, 1898 same date $5.25, and in 1899 $6.20. It is said that there are not as many cattle in Texas now as in 1895 by more than 2,500,000. Nor is the decline in numbers in the United States alone. Cuba was said to have about eight hundred thousand cattle in 1895, and at the close of the war had but twenty-five thousand. There must have been a great reduction in South Africa since the Boer war began, and Australia has been heavily drawn upon to feed British troops. If five or ten years ago farmers in New England or any of the United States could not raise or fatten beef profitably to sell at the price Western beef cattle could when brought here, it does not follow that they cannot do both now. Six dollars and a quarter per hundred pounds in Brighton for the best grade of steers to-day should leave a margin for profit to the feeder, if he feeds to the best advantage, and if he grows his own young stock, and most of his own food for them, it seems as if nearly all was profit, or at least pay for his labor. And while they are growing, the manure heap is increasing in size, to help add fertility to the farm and increase its productivity.—American Cultivator.

For Washing Vegetables.

A combined washing tank and drying table for vegetables, is illustrated in the Ohio Farmer. A is the tank, B the table, hinged to tank, and the legs hinged to table. When not in use, the two legs are folded over on the table, and the table folded over so as to make a lid for the tank, the legs folding inside out of the way. The tank can be set anywhere for convenience. The bottom of the tank should be lower at one corner, with a hole there to let out water by withdrawing a plug. Potatoes and other vegetables should be washed before taking to market. They present a nice, clean appearance that makes them sell better.

Early Garden Vegetables.

There was a time when the gardener who had his produce ready for the market earlier than his less enterprising neighbor was well repaid for his care and trouble by better prices for the products. Then the early bird caught the wealthy consumer. Now the early worm in the Northern States finds his profits if not himself picked up by those in a Southern climate, who can plant, grow and put on the market a crop before the plow can penetrate the frozen soil of the Northern States. We are inclined to think the chance for profit to-day, for market gardeners here, is in growing such crops as will not mature until Southern produce no longer fills our markets, and perhaps in putting that in cold storage that it may not be brought out until there are indications that it is much wanted by those who are willing to pay liberal prices for it. Let early crops pass by, and strive to grow crops of such quality as will suit even those who have been using the earlier products of the South, which are not improved by long transportation.—Massachusetts Ploughman.

Pasture for Hogs.

Pasture is necessary to the successful raising of hogs. Not only is green feed the best, and almost indispensable for growing swine, but the exercise required in grazing is just as important. The cheapest feed for hogs is that grown by the owner and harvested by the stock. In the Southwest there is no lack of forage plants for every month in the year, and hence pork can be produced at less cost than elsewhere. When this is not done, it is not the fault of the country nor of the hogs, but is the result of bad management on the part of the hog raiser.—Farm and Ranch.

Barley and Oats.

At the North Dakota Experiment Station they made a trial for nine months of the comparative value of feeding oats and barley to three horses and two mules. In every case of animals working in pairs at the same work, the one given barley made less gain or lost more flesh, according to the work they were doing. When changed about the result was the same. The one that gained flesh on oats lost it on barley. Beside this, if the barley feed was continued long, the animal that had it would refuse to eat the barley, sometimes for several meals. The rough fodder was the same, good timothy hay in all cases. They therefore decided that barley was not as valuable food for horses as oats when fed in equal weights.

The Cranberry Fireworm.

The larvae of Rhyacionia vacciniana, or cranberry fireworm, cause considerable damage to the cranberry crop of Massachusetts. The larvae of the first brood seldom cause much injury, while those of the second brood are often exceedingly destructive. Where the cranberry bogs can be flooded with water at the proper season for destroying the larvae, this method is very effective, but in many cases it is impossible to use water in this way. Experiments were tried with arsenate of lead, which was used as a spray at the rate of 9 pounds to 150 gallons of water. The first application was made in the early part of June. The second brood of caterpillars appeared during the first part of July, and a second application was made, the insecticide being used at the rate of 13½ pounds to 150 gallons of water. Nearly all the larvae were destroyed, and a great saving in the cranberry crop was the result of this method. It was found that three men with a good outfit could spray eight acres of cranberry bog in ten hours.

A $5,000 Cow.

This cow was purchased at the Chicago stock yards recently for $5,000 by N. W. Brown, of Delphi, Ind., and is a Hereford. Carnation, a Kansas City cow, held the former world's record. A few weeks ago, at an exciting sale, J. C. Adams, of Moweaqua, Ill., bought the animal for $3,700.

Fodder Corn.

The farmer who does not plan to have a field of corn fodder to use this summer for his milk cows will deserve no pity if he finds his milk supply so short next summer that it will not sell for enough to pay what it costs him for feed. The excess of rain during the first four months of this year may be taken as a good indication of a drought later on, and the crop is so easily and cheaply grown, so valuable if needed for feeding green, and so easily kept for winter use if not fed in the summer that there seems no excuse for failing to produce it. There are other forage crops that have been highly recommended, but we think the corn crop is as well adapted to New England as any, and almost any one knows the soil and care it needs. We would put in one field in May and follow with others up to the middle of July to give continuous feeding when needed.—New England Homestead.

About Cows.

The Farm Journal says that a cow giving 5,000 pounds of 4 per cent milk will produce only $50 worth of butter, while one that will produce 8,000 pounds of 5 per cent milk will produce $100 worth of butter, and her calf is worth three times as much as that of the first. There will be little difference in the cost of keeping the two cows, so that where the first gives a profit of $30 the latter will net the owner $100. If we count the first cow's calf at $10 and the other at $30. Some people do not think there is much difference in cows, but some cows forget to pay their board bills, while others take great pleasure in supplying the table with luxuries, paying the interest, clothing the baby and paying the hired girl. The good cow is a poor farmer's friend.

Creamery Butter.

It is reported that in the vicinity of some of the best creameries in the butter-making sections it is difficult to obtain a package of really good creamery butter, unless it is sent from the city dealers who may have bought it right there. An ironclad contract places it all in the hands of certain dealers, and even those who place their milk in co-operative creameries are not able to obtain good butter for home use. This is but a mistake, for those which have a good reputation could easily have a certain number of pounds or tubs to be retained for home patrons, and it is said that some do this, avoiding their contracts by putting special brands on such lots.

Old Melon Seed.

An English gardener tells that having noticed that plants from old seed produced a less succulent growth than did those from young seed for four years he raised his melon plants from old seed, always growing a few plants from new seed. He says: "I then fertilized the female flowers of the older plants with the pollen of the younger, which plants were invariably the more robust. The resulting fruits were more reliable in good quality, and though the female flowers had been small the fruits were large, weighing from three pounds to seven pounds." This experience seems to strengthen the existing idea that old melon seed is more satisfactory than new.

REVISION NOT WANTED.

Business Interests Not Favorable to Tariff Tinkering.

Senator Hanna voices the sentiments of the members of the Republican party when he declares against any attempt at tariff revision. The manufacturing and commercial interests of the country were never in better shape than at the present time; there may be some danger to the speculative element, but little to the real interests. No one needs to be told that these conditions will be changed if the slightest meddling with tariff laws is permitted. Uncertainty will take the place of confidence if there is to be any discussion of the matter, and with uncertainty capital will go back into hiding. It is well that this position of the Republican party against changing the tariff of an "U" or the crossing of a "Y" in the Dingley law be made clear before the convening of Congress. Democratic attacks on the tariff are to be expected, but it is known that the Republican majority stands united against any change, they will have but slight effect as a disturbing element in commercial and manufacturing centers.

The favorite line of Democratic assault, of course, will be to place the products of "trusts" on the free lists. This plan has a sentimental value, for it appeals to the imagination of some, but it is not apparent that it has any real value. Before it can be considered

Court, and the result is well known. The June sun of Nebraska's plains must have been too much for Mr. Bryan. He should at least read the Supreme Court's decision and face the facts of it as a man, not as a boy wonder or a campaign agitator.—Chicago Intelligencer.

It Means Business.

Two thousand freight cars ordered during the space of two weeks is the record made by the railroads of the country. That means business, both now and in the future. It presents evidence of the fact that not only are the railroads crowded with business, beyond their capacity to handle, but also that the officials of the railroads are confident that the rush of business is going to continue. They are looking to the future in their extension of the equipment of their roads, and are getting ready for the continual increase in the demand for transportation facilities which the ever-growing business prosperity of the country will bring about. The demand for freight cars is the other end of the industrial chain, which has its beginning in the crowded order books of the commercial travelers, all of whom report that business was never so active or orders so numerous and so heavy as now.

A Monopoly Smashed by Protection. Now it is announced from London that "the Welsh tin plate industry, which has already been stricken by practically there are two questions to be considered thoroughly and answered:

First—If trusts are an outgrowth of the tariff, why do they exist in free-trade England?

Second—Might not the abolition of the protective tariff on certain products only fix more firmly the control of trusts by wiping out all possibility of competition?

The first phase was thoroughly discussed during the past campaign, and the consensus of opinion was that the trusts existed irrespective of protection. The other point is one that has not been convincingly discussed or investigated. Partial investigations seem, however, to indicate that the abolition of the protective tariff in many industries would completely crush out the smaller manufacturer and thus render more secure their control by the trusts. Mr. Carnegie, before his retirement took the position that he had reached the position where he himself no longer needed protection, but made no reference to the effect of the abolition of protection upon the other and smaller manufacturers of iron and steel. The American Woolen Company, a trust, openly advocates the abolishment of the protective tariff, for the reason that it would fix its control of the market.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Brasserie Blather.

"The Supreme Court," says Editor W. J. Bryan, "has declared President McKinley Emperor of Porto Rico. It declares Congress greater than the Constitution. It denies the necessity of a written Constitution. It assails the foundation of the republic. It has joined with the President and Congress to change the form of our government. But there yet remains and here we may imagine Mr. Bryan pointing to his trusty jaw—"an appeal to the people." Having waited a full week before delivering his manifesto, Mr. Bryan might at least have read the Supreme Court's decision. Evidently he has been too busy to do so. For what has the Supreme Court done?

In the first place, it has decided that our new possessions are American soil, and that our title to them is perfect—a fact strenuously denied by Mr. Bryan in his recent attempt to win the Presidency as the friend of Aguinaldo.

In the next place, the Supreme Court has decided that Porto Rico must wait for full political privileges until the American people, through Congress, see fit to grant them.

Doubtless there is much to regret in the attitude of the Supreme Court. But even so, there has been no coronation of Mr. McKinley, nor any other of the imperial things imagined by Mr. Bryan. Nor is Congress in any way authorized to govern these new possessions feudally, as Mr. Bryan falsely asserts.

Once before Mr. Bryan tried to appeal to the people against the Supreme American competition, is menaced by early extinction, owing to the failure of the employers to agree on a scale of wages."

When these Welsh makers monopolized the market, as they did before the McKinley tariff, they had a hard and fast trust of their own which dictated prices to the helpless Yankees, and wages to the helpless workmen. But American rivalry has changed all this. Our mills, with improved machinery and better paid labor, have not only gained the American market, but are cutting into the markets of the Welsh "combine" abroad.

The comic side of it all is that the protective duty of the McKinley tariff was vociferously opposed by the professional foes of monopoly. As a practical result it has smashed monopoly, and in the long run it is certain to give the mastery in one more branch of the great iron and steel trade to the United States, where it legitimately belongs.—Boston Journal.

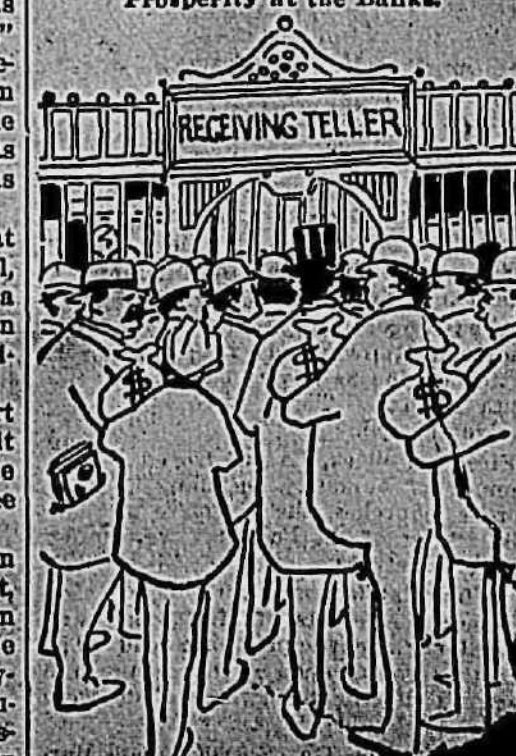

Wrong Kind of Reciprocity.

Let us have no tampering in the way of reciprocating treaties that do reciprocating the wrong way. To be sure such treaties carefully constructed assist American industries, but they do so, as the patterns rejected show, at the expense of certain other American industries. This, then, is not reciprocity, but simply nothing more or less than the English tariff idea of fair trade.—Racine (Wis.) Journal.

An Axiom.

Protection seldom falls to make the farmer happy. Contrast his condition under the Dingley and McKinley bills with that under the Wilson and Mills bills. It is an axiom that when the farmer is prosperous, the rest will be happy.—California (Mo.) Herald.

Prosperity at the Banks.

Owing to the great increase of its, extra help is required at the doors of the receiving tellers.

BRIEF COMPILATION OF ILLINOIS NEWS.

Old Farmer's Insane Act—Illinois Day at Pan-American Exposition—Two suicides Near Bloomington—Milk's Savings Guarded by Snakes—Hinky Fire.

Michael Ryan, aged 70 years, was arrested on his farm south of Maple Park, and is now in jail at Geneva charged with burning his own barn. It is stated that some time ago Ryan, who is a widower, wanted to marry a woman with three children, inmates of the DeKalb County almshouse. Ryan's children objected and secured the appointment of a conservator for their father. He became angry at this and one afternoon the family saw him go to the barn. Shortly after they were surprised to see that all the live stock was turned out to pasture. Ryan had been in the house but a few minutes when flames were leaping from the barn. It burned to the ground, with the contents—hay, machinery and 500 bushels of grain.

Names June 25 Illinois Day.

Gov. Yates has selected June 25 as Illinois day at the Pan-American Exposition in response to the invitation of the director general of the exposition, W. I. Buchanan. The day will be Tuesday of what is known as "Sangre de Cristo" week. With Odd Fellows' day on Wednesday, Senator J. V. Templeton, chairman of the Illinois commissioners to the exposition, has consented to take charge of arrangements for the day, which will mark the completion and dedication of the Illinois State building. The Governor and the members of his staff will leave Chicago June 22, stopping at Niagara Falls en route. Various civic and military organizations of the State will be invited to participate in the exercises at Buffalo.

Two Men Commit Suicide.

Two young men, John W. Brandt of Bloomington and Alfred Grohans, a Frenchman, employed by Joseph Bullard on his farm in eastern McLean County, committed suicide the other night. Brandt returned recently from the Philippines, where he was made a sergeant for gallant conduct. He was in love with a young woman in Bloomington, but she rejected his suit, and he took strychnine in a fit of despondency. Grohans insulted the wife of his employer while Mr. Bullard was at the bedside of a sick friend. She fled to her neighbors, and Grohans, fearing they would injure him, blew out his brains with a shotgun.

Snakes Guard Hermit's Hoard.

John Rhodes, an old recluse, who lived in a lonely hut in the southern part of Washington County, was found dead. There were evidences of foul play, and the coroner and a number of citizens made an examination of the cabin, which resulted in the discovery of three big rattlesnakes coiled up in an empty barrel. The snakes were killed and under a lot of leaves where they had been sleeping, an old tobacco pouch was found half filled with money. In a barrel two black snakes were found. It is believed that Rhodes made the snakes his companions and that they guarded his money.

Damaging Blaze at Quincy.

Fire in the building occupied by the Tank Hardware Company at Quincy destroyed the building, valued at $15,000, and the stock of merchandise, valued at $55,000. Smoke and water damaged the stock of Crooks & Cox to the extent of $2,000; Gilles Brothers, $500; Yeast Clothing Company, $500; F. T. Hill, $500; Nichols & Elmick, $500. These losses are all covered by insurance. George Schless, chief of the fire department, was badly burned by coming in contact with a live wire.

In a contested election case for city treasurer of Lebanon, in which the legality of the votes of the students of McKendree College was called in question, Judge Perrin of the St. Clair court ruled that no student residing for a portion of the year in the State can by claiming his regular home acquire a residence at the college seat which would entitle him to a vote there.

Clemence Charlier, a young woman who is the prosecuting witness in an assault case against four young men in Joliet, has been spirited away. A jury has been secured and the testimony was about to begin. Officials promise a big sensation.

William Decker, aged 33, employed on the farm of F. O. Cox, six miles north of Virginia, was killed while driving a mack home. He entered

The new board of trustees of the Quincy Soldiers' Home, composed of Gen. John C. Black, Chicago; Maj. Charles V. Hawes, Rock Island; and Capt. Charles V. Chandler, Macomb, met and organized with Gen. Black as president. On the nomination of Gov. Yates, the present superintendent, Capt. William Somerville, was unanimously re-elected to succeed himself.

The Illinois Corn Belt Oil and Gas Company, incorporated for $50,000 under the laws of Indiana, has secured valuable options in Cole, Monticello and Shelby counties, and is seeking to obtain franchises to pipe gas into Sullivan, Charleston and Windsor. The company guarantees to furnish sufficient gas for all purposes in the cities mentioned if franchises are granted.

Gov. Yates' veto message on the Partridge claim bill has been stolen from the Secretary of State's office. A duplicate of it has been filed, but this does not change the amazing fact that in State paper has been filched from the State archives. Only one motive for making away with such a paper can be surmised: Belief that disappearance of the veto message would nullify the veto itself and so leave the bill in effect as if it had been approved.

Edward Forsyth, an actor, who had killed Edna May Stokes in the part of the Vernon Hotel in Chicago. The woman was afraid of Forsyth and had begged the hotel clerk not to permit him. Forsyth finally gained an audience with her, and before her friends could interfere had fired two shots, one of which pierced her heart. Forsyth escaped into the street pursued by a mob who shot at the shot and the porter. After a lively chase the murderer was captured.

The Supreme Court in denying the petition of William Henry for a writ of habeas corpus placed a new construction upon this point of law. It is held that when a lower court declines to admit to bail a prisoner held for a capital crime, such action precludes consideration of this case under habeas corpus proceedings by the Supreme Court; that the entering of a motion to admit to bail in the lower court is equivalent in effect to habeas corpus proceedings, and the law provides that only one habeas corpus proceeding may be instituted in the same cause.

A complete reorganization of the branch of the State fish department will take place immediately. The reorganization, while conducted by the once the head of these respective departments will be under the supervision of the error. Four bids on the pavilion made, but all were in excess of the appropriation and the committee threw them out. The committee then figured with McAlpin, the lowest bidder, and he was given the work after the plans were modified.

The experience of C. A. Snow & Co. in obtaining more than 20,000 patents for inswer many questions relating to the prohave done in a pamphlet treating briefly of cost of same, and how to procure them;

trade marks, designs, caveats, infringe-

Braid on Men's Coats.

No new fashion in men's dress is so distinctive of this season as the braid to be found on coats now coming here from London tailors and made up by the best of the local establishments.
For a decade or more the rough cloths made in freck or morning coats have been finished without braid and it began to look as if the old fashion of garments was never to be restored to favor. English makers began a year ago to send their American customers these coats trimmed with braid and they have now taken their place among the necessities of this season's fashion. New York Sun.

A Bird in the Tree.

A bill for the incorporation of Ridley, Tenn., has passed both houses of the Tennessee legislature. It contains the following paragraph: "Thence north, 35 degrees east, to a black gum marked with a cross and with mistletoe in the top, and with a bluebird sitting on a limb, which tree is a short distance east of Ed Johnson's horse lot."

Deception has even reached the dis- ciples of Flora.

There has lately been introduced into the market a bulb called "The sacred lily of the Nile."
The name is sufficiently catching to fascinate lovers of flowers, and a friend of mine added the new flower to his conservatory. Time passed, and up came the plant, but when the "sacred lily of the Nile" appeared, he found only an old friend, but still agreeable friend in the homely narcissus.—East Anglian Times.

How They Eat Oranges.

The style of eating oranges in Cuba
is to peel the luscious fruit round and round as an apple would be, care being taken to cut just through the yellow rind, leaving the white skin entire.
It is then cut open through the middle
and eaten from the hand, no spoons being used. Oranges already peeled are
for sale at every fruit stand, though Americans, it is noticed, in Cuba prefer to peel their own.

Growth of the Beard.

It has been calculated that the hair
of the beard grows at the rate of one and a half lines a week. This will give a length of six and a half inches
in the course of a year. For a man 80
years of age no less than twenty-seven feet of beard must have fallen before
the edge of the razor.

The bilious, tired, nervous man can do successfully compete with his healthy rival.

Says She Acts Like a Cow.

Next to a mouse or the equally harmless cow the horseless vehicle is coming to have more terror for women than almost anything else. And it cannot be denied that this fear is not without foundation, for as Lord Beresford once said, these space annihilators
"with the appearance of a hearse and the manners of a kangaroo," at times sweep through the streets with demor-alizing speed. When a woman at a downtown crossing sees one of these machines come tearing along in her direction she does not know which way to turn, so quietly and swiftly does it rush on. It dazes her. It unsettles her nerves. Children run screaming at the approach of an auto. "I know," said a woman the other day, "that whenever I see an automobile coming toward me I act like a cow in front of a railway train. But I cannot help it. I am as afraid of it as I am of death."

Consumption of Coffee.

The total annual consumption of coffee is: United States, 802,000,000 lbs.; Germany, 344,000,000; France, 179,000,
000; Austria-Hungary, 92,000,000; Italy,
31,000,000; Great Britain, 29,000,000;
Russia, 18,000,000. The United States thus consumes more coffee than all other countries together. It has imported coffee as follows: In 1870, 231,
000,000 lbs.; 1880, 440,000,000; 1890, 480, 000,000. The amount per inhabitant was in 1870, 6 pounds; in 1890, 11.45 pounds; 1899, 10.55 pounds. France uses per inhabitant, 4.5 pounds; Austria, 2 pounds; Great Britain, 0.7 pound. The importations come from different countries as below: Brazil, 628,000,000 pounds; Venezuela, 62,000,
000; Colombia, 28,000,000; Mexico, 27,
000,000; Costa Rica, 17,000,000; Guatemala, 15,000,000.

Growth of the Beard.

It has been calculated that the hair
of the beard grows at the rate of one
and a half lines a week. This will give a length of six and a half inches
in the course of a year. For a man 80
years of age no less than twenty-seven
feet of beard must have fallen before
the edge of the razor.

A Reward of Vice.

We read in the daily papers that a Frenchman left 10,000,000 francs to the city of Rouen for the purpose of giving a prize annually as a marriage gift to two giants, the design being to improve the physical stature of the race.
This seems the silliest of all "rewards of vice," which much modern phantasy is. Giants are usually diseased, the most certainly so the larger they are, and they are of less service to the world than people of ordinary size. Indeed, giantism is itself a disease. Then, too, the law of inheritance doesn't always work as planned by the foolish court. His marriage prize would very likely have the very opposite result from what he wished.—

Use for Worn-Out Dimes.

"The telephone slot machines are doing an enormous work in the matter of taking worn-out dimes out of circulation," explained a treasury official. "There is nothing to prevent worn-out, mutilated and almost smooth dimes from being put into the slots, and as a result many persons keep the worn-out dimes for that purpose. Many druggists and others who keep public telephones make no objection to taking mutilated dimes any more for the reason that they keep a supply on hand to do a telephone business with. When they see that a telephone user is going to put a new dime in the slot they simply take it in and hand a worn-out dime in exchange."—Washington Star.

Literature.

Of course I made a case of mistaken identity the basis of my novel. It was my intention, understand, that the heroine mistake the villain for a Boston terrier, and fall in love with him.
Clever, was it not? But to my chagrin
I unthinkingly made the heroine a greater character than I could well control. In spite of all I could do, she mistook the villain for Adam's off ox and gave him the laugh. This necessitated a complete reconstruction of the local color and some portions of the dialogue, and the book which I had expected to write in two weeks has already consumed nearly a month of my time.—Detroit Journal.

How They Eat Oranges.

The style of eating oranges in Cuba
is to peel the luscious fruit round and round as an apple would be, care being taken to cut just through the yellow rind, leaving the white skin entire.
It is then cut open through the middle
and eaten from the hand, no spoons
being used. Oranges already peeled are
for sale at every fruit stand, though
Americans, it is noticed, in Cuba prefer to peel their own.
